

Educational tourism as a tool to promote the culture and history of Crete and Cyprus #EduTourism

Educational tourism is a crucial factor for the promotion and preservation of the rich culture and history of Crete and Cyprus. Both of these island regions, each with their own unique traditions and rich history, have elevated educational tourism as a way to share their culture and heritage with the rest of the world. In this article, we will examine how educational tourism contributes to the promotion and preservation of the culture and history of these two unique destinations.

Educational Tourism: linking history and culture

Educational tourism often aims to provide educational experiences through visits to historical and cultural sites. In Crete, visitors can explore archaeological sites such as Knossos, learn about Minoan cultural heritage and engage in heritage study.

In Cyprus, the educational experience is enhanced by the presence of sites such as the archaeological sites of Paphos and the ancient city of Kalavassos. In addition, the island of Cyprus offers opportunities to become familiar with local cuisine, music and culture.

Conservation and Protection

Educational tourism is not only a promotional tool, but also a tool for the protection and preservation of culture and history. Through visitor awareness, culture and heritage become more accessible and worth preserving for future generations.

People as Living History

Local people play an important role in educational tourism, shaping a living history. Hearing narratives from locals and learning about their daily lives helps to foster connectivity with the local culture.

Overall, educational tourism highlights the culture and history of Crete and Cyprus, making these areas destinations not only for fun, but also for learning and experience. In this way, visitors can discover their rich heritage and share it with the rest of the world, while helping to preserve it for the future.

The EduTourism project is implemented within the framework of the INTERREG V-A Cooperation Programme "Greece - Cyprus 2014-2020" and is co-funded by the European Union (E.T.P.A.) and the National Funds of Greece and Cyprus.
